Reds Advancing On Kiev, German Report Asserts

Nazi Detachments Declared Fleeing

By JAMES M. LONG

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 27 (P)—The Red army hurled defeated German troops to their death in the swift-flowing Dnieper yesterday, and smashed forward to the Eastern bank of the river opposite Kiev's beckoning domes, Moscow announced early today.

Berlin officially declared that some Russian units already had crossed the 1,400-foot wide river, presumably to begin the encirclement of the glittering Ukraine capital, and a Moscow report quoted by Reuters said:

"Rats" Flee Kiev

"There can be no doubt that detachments of Hitlerite plunders already are fleeing from Kiev like rats from a sinking ship."

The Russians swept up more than 25 more villages on all fronts, a bulletin said.

Near Kremenchug, southeast of Kiev, the Soviet communists said four units, after overcoming enemy resistance, threw the remnants of Germans into the Dnieper.

"More than 600 enemy dead remained on the field of action and a great number were drowned in the river."

The Russians said they killed 800 Germans trying to stem their plunge toward Kiev, battering down strong enemy counter-attacks launched at Brovary, ten miles to the east.

Latest Berlin Statement

Berlin's communistic telling of a Russian crossing at undisclosed river points said the Red army units had been repulsed, but did not say they had been hurled back to the Eastern bank.

The Moscow communistic, recorded by the Soviet monitor, merely announced the Russians had broken through to the river near Kiev, Kremenchug, and Dnepetrovsk, key areas along a 250-mile stretch of the river.

Between Kiev and fallen Smolensk the Russians said their troops, striking twenty-six miles west of the Smolensk-Roslavl railway, had captured Monastirskina, on the edge of White Russia.

This column was aimed toward Mogilev on the Gomel-Orsha-Vitebsk railway—last north-south line between the Russians and the old Polish border barely 100 miles beyond the Soviet frontier.

"The gates to the west are open," declared Pravda, Soviet newspaper, in saluting the fall of Smolensk.

Rail Junction Falls

Novozybkov, rail junction only forty miles from Gomel, fell to the Red army, the communistic said.

Russian troops were reported only twenty-five miles from Vitebsk, in upper White Russia, in a smash paralleling the drive beyond Smolensk to the southeast.

One German broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said Russian parachute troops were dropping behind Axis positions and it was obvious the entire Dnieper river line was imperiled. The Dnieper is the last big natural defense barrier before the Polish border.

Plane Factories Boost Production

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26 (P)—Pacific coast plane factories have increased production 4,260 percent by weight since January, 1940, the aircraft war production council reported today.

Shelving of Welles Seen as Move Against Professional Diplomats

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (P)—Appointment of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., as undersecretary of state is regarded here as a bold move by President Roosevelt to prepare American diplomacy for forthcoming tri-partite meetings with Britain and Russia.

The president, it is said, shows by this choice that he means to entrust most of the critical negotiations now developing to men of hard-headed business experience rather than to more professional diplomats or to persons whose views toward Russia are based on ideological rather than realistic considerations.

Fortresses Raid Rheims Airport

Make Big Attack Without Losses

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 27 (P)—American Flying Fortresses attacked an airfield at Rheims, France, late yesterday, a communistic announced early today.

Both the bombers and their escort returned without loss of a plane.

A joint American-British communistic said:

"It is announced by the air ministry and the headquarters of the European theater of operations of the United States army that United States Eighth Air Force Flying Fortresses attacked the Champagne airfield at Rheims last Sunday.

"U.S.A.F. Thunderbolts and RAF, Dominion, and Allied Spitfires supported the heavy bombers.

"None of our aircraft is missing from the operations.

"Two RAF fighters are missing from an offensive patrol over France earlier in the day."

Large Scale Raids

Allied bombers and fighters had swept by the hundreds through the chill sky over the channel late yesterday to assault Nazi objectives in Northern France in one of the greatest operations of the Allied air offensive.

Watches in the Folkestone area saw a great fleet of bombers, covered by Spitfires, in one of the seemingly unending formations.

Bombers and fighters—layer upon layer—went over at altitudes ranging from 10,000 to 30,000 feet.

To veteran coastal observers it was one of the most spectacular exhibitions of Allied air power yet seen.

Countless feathery vapor trails etched in the sky, became a tangle of skeins as the formations reached the enemy side of the channel and challenged Nazi fighters.

British Give Thanks

While Allied air fleets gave the continent a brisk bomb-lashing in demonstration of the overwhelming aerial might achieved in three years, the British people, from king to commoner, paid tribute to the RAF's "few" who won the battle of Britain.

Farm Bloc Plans To Wage Battle Over Subsidies

Opposes Spending Billion Dollars

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (P)—The Farm Bloc squared off today for a new battle in Congress over subsidies as it learned with mixed emotions of administration plans to spend upwards of $1,000,000,000 in the next year to keep retail food prices down.

Advised that War Food Administrator Marvin Jones would seek to double the present $500,000,000 borrowing authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation and extend its life eighteen months, farm state members made it plain they will want to know how much money is to be spent on direct subsidies and where it is going.

Subsidy Flareup Ahead

Thus the waning battle over the farm draft seemed likely to be followed sharply by a subsidy flare-up left smoldering when Congress went home in July after extending the life of the CCC to January 1.

The draft question will come before the Senate Tuesday with indications that the Wheeler bill to postpone induction of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers until after Jan. 1 will be relegated to a military committee pigeonhole after two or three days of furious debate.

Once this is out of the way, the Senate is expected to turn its attention to the subsidy issue.

Senator Aiken (R-Vt.), a member of the Agricultural committee, said he thought the administration "simply is trying to drive in a wedge" for food subsidies in its projected new program.

Calls For $500,000,000

This program would envision use of about $500,000,000 in existing CCC funds plus the new grant, for price-supporting crop for an unlimited amount of direct subsidies, and to cover losses on government resale of commodities.

Aiken said it is his belief that a full-blown subsidy program to keep all good prices down would cost from $2,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 yearly.

"I think Mr. Jones will need a better story than he was able to produce in support of the milk subsidy before he gets approval of the program from Congress," Aiken said.

Explaining that he was not opposed to all subsidies, the Vermont senator declared he would back the price support program under which CCC would buy in a sagging market and sell at a loss to increase production of foodstuffs.

Opposition in House

That portion of the proposal seems likely to meet with general approval in the Senate, although it has some opposition in the House.

Although the administration program calls for no additions to the "rollback" subsidies now being paid with reconstruction finance corporation funds on meat and butter, Senator Taft (R-Ohio), said he would demand an accounting of the cost of the latter.

"I imagine that the whole subsidy question will be opened up again and I would not be surprised if a move is made to ban rollbacks," he said.

Report Sabotage Of Nazi Warships

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 27 (P)—Three German capital ships, the Tirpitz, Scharnhorst and Lutzow, are reported to have been sabotaged by their own crews in the Altan fjord of Norway following disclosure of the surrender of the Italian fleet, a Reuters dispatch from Stockholm said today.

Man Who Fined Hitler Dies in New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (P)—Dr. Kurt Rosenfeld, 67, Prussian minister for justice in 1919-20, who once fined Adolf Hitler 1,000 marks for contempt of court, died Saturday night at his home in Sunnyside, Queens.

A prominent anti-Nazi, he came to the United States in 1934. At the time of his death he was chairman of the German-American Emergency Conference, founded last year to fight Nazism and Fascism and to support the Allies, and was publisher of the German-American, a monthly periodical.

Japs Delaying Frontal Attack On Finschhafen

Australians Meet Stiff Opposition

By OLEN W. CLEMENTS

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Monday, Sept. 27 (P)—A frontal attack on Finschhafen by tough Australian jungle fighters has slowed before stiffening enemy resistance, but the Japanese desperately defending that East New Guinea coastal base today found themselves simultaneously confronted by the threat of encirclement from the rear.

The Australians, advancing from their landing point to the north, encountered enemy defense in strength immediately after crossing the wide and swift-flowing Bumi river. The scene of the fighting was on the very outskirts of Finschhafen itself and less than three-quarters of a mile from the heart of the Japanese base.

Meet Tough Situation

This, a headquarters spokesman said, has caused a necessarily more cautious approach and brought the Australians up against a system of trenches and strongly constructed earthworks.

The spokesman emphasized that the slow-down was voluntary and was ordered to enable the Australians to hit the Japanese positions in force with full assurance of dislodging the enemy.

Concurrent Allied troop movements from other directions seemed to suggest that the longer the Japanese held off the danger on their immediate front, the more certain was their eventual doom.

Today's communistic disclosed that a second Allied force, moving east and north from captured Lae, some fifty miles below Finschhafen, already has reached the vicinity of Hanish harbor, half way to the beleaguered enemy base.

Third Element Involved

Still a third element, composed of units from the original Finschhafen assault force which landed above the settlement Sept. 22, was reported to have moved west Sept. 24, and to have approached Staelberg, six miles inland from Dampier strait and ten miles from Finschhafen.

The following day Allied planes supporting the ground troops bombed and strafed villages south of Bumi river. The enemy retaliated with an attack by nine bombers along the Song river, seven miles north of Finschhafen and directly north of the Allied-held Finschhafen airfield. Little damage was caused, the communistic said.

Inland and to the west, Allied war planes dropped forty-six tons of bombs on enemy camps in the valley of the Ramu river, which empties into the Bismarck sea north of New Guinea in the vicinity of Wewak.

Another bomb load, of twenty-nine tons, plastered roads and bridges in the Bogadimim area, twenty miles south of Madang, further hampering the enemy's overland retreat to the North shore of the island.

Police said that Hattman was changing a flat tire on the parked car when an automobile struck him.

Leon Henderson Scores Fascists

Warns against Badoglio Rule

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (P)—Leon Henderson, former OPA administrator, asserted tonight the Allies should "provide an official rallying point for Liberal Italians" and "place less reliance on fascist officials."

In an address prepared for delivery at a meeting sponsored by the Mazzini society and the union for Democratic action, Henderson declared:

Distrusts Badoglio

"Make no mistake, if Badoglio and his reactionaries have interim control of the mechanism of government, and access to the Allied radio, they will be prepared for something just as bad as Fascism, though it will be dressed in a coat of many colors instead of black. And make no mistake, either, the Communists will be prepared."

"I here propose that our leadership go further than mere urging that liberals and left-wing elements associate themselves with the King Victor Emmanuel and Marshal Badoglio."

Asserting that "Italy is the test tube for the common man awaiting liberation" in occupied countries, Henderson said "I find little nourishment for his hopes in Churchill's speech of last week."

"I could hope," he continued, "as did English labor and liberals, that the prime minister's great eloquence and ingenuity could be turned more in the direction of sustaining those who fought fascism for twenty years."

Quotes Roosevelt

Quoting President Roosevelt's statement that the people of Italy will choose "their own government, in accordance with the basic principles of liberty and equality," Henderson said:

"That's a good starter for any charter, Atlantic or Mediterranean. But it should be required reading for the house of Savoy, Badoglio, the AMG, and the State department. And even Churchill and Eden could read it with profit."

New Headache for Adolf:

BERLIN TAKES GRAVE VIEW OF LATEST ALLIED GAINS

Strong Concentrations of Power in Italy Give Germany Another Attack of Jitters

By A. I. GOLDBERG

LONDON, Sept. 26 (P)—Berlin is taking a grave view of the improved Allied position for new landings, flanking defenses in Italy either from the west or east coasts, or an invasion of the Balkans from the Adriatic, dispatches from the German capital indicated today.

Spanish correspondents in Berlin said that strong concentrations of Allied air and naval forces on Sardinia and the Allied-held portion of Corsica have aroused fears there that a landing in the Legin area of the Italian West coast is an early possibility.

Allies Hold Bases

Air bases on Sardinia and Corsica could provide a protective umbrella far superior to aerial protection the Allies were able to give the American Fifth Army's landing at Salerno from bases in Sicily.

On the German left flank, the Spanish dispatches said, Allied possession of south Balkan Adriatic ports as Split and Susak and the neutralization of Trieste through Yugoslav Guerrilla activity afford protection for Allied landings on the Italian east coast or provide an open doorway to invasion of the Balkans.

The Yugoslav government's information bureau said today that guerrilla forces have beaten off new German attacks on the strategic port of Split, and still hold the greater part of Susak.

All German efforts to organize their Yugoslav defenses against Allied attacks have been paralyzed by partisan armies, it said.

Yugoslav Drive Gains

Most of the fighting around Split and Susak has been credited to the peoples' liberation army, but a Swiss dispatch from Budapest said yesterday that the Yugoslav campaign was passing from the guerrilla stage to a full-scale military operation with a force of 180,000 armed men fighting under Allied command.

Nazis Tighten Defenses

Allied positions in the Middle East and landings on Aegean islands and in the Dodecanese group have led to a German tightening of Eastern Balkan defenses also.

Reports reaching Istanbul said today that German troops were occupying the Balkans. (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Crossing Crash Fatal to Seven

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 26 (P)—Seven persons were killed here today as "The Pacemakers," fast Chicago to New York passenger train, of the New York Central Railroad struck an automobile at the Arnold street crossing.

All of the bodies were badly mangled and were scattered in the wreckage of the automobile for six blocks, the distance it took the speeding train to stop.

The crossing watchman, said he signalled frantically for the automobile to stop when he saw it approaching. The occupants were laughing, however, and apparently saw neither his signals nor the train.

German Historians Delayed by War

LONDON, Sept. 26 (P)—Regardless of what Hitler may think or say, German historians have decided to wait for the facts.

This note of caution was observed in a Berlin radio announcement: "It will not be possible to issue a definite textbook on history for German schools until the war is over."

Tanks, Infantry Penetrate Nazi Defense Lines

Seize Important Inland Positions

By WES GALLAGHER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 26 (P)—American tanks and infantry have smashed their way thirty miles deep into German defenses north-east of Salerno, front line dispatches disclosed tonight as the Allies registered important gains all the way across Italy from the Tyrrhenian to the Adriatic.

News of the American advance came only a few hours after the British Eighth Army, sweeping twenty-seven miles up the Eastern coast in one of the biggest single day's thrusts of the Italian invasion, entered the Foggia plain within twenty-five miles of that city's elaborate string of air bases which headquarters said already had been abandoned by the Germans.

Yanks Gain 30 Miles

The thirty-mile gain by American troops was made in six days against concentrated German machinegun, mortar and artillery defenses in the roughest kind of mountain country extending east and north of the Salerno beachhead.

The exact front line position of the American troops was not disclosed for security reasons but their new advance places them considerably inland from the coast.

American forces hold the Eastern flank of the Fifth Army line while British troops hold the Western flank just north of Salerno where they are engaged in the most violent type of mountain fighting.

As the result of the American advance on the Fifth Army's right wing and the British Eighth Army's entrance into the Foggia plain on the heels of the retreating Germans, the Allied line now runs directly across Italy from a point above Salerno northeast to the Adriatic at a point just above the Ofanto river. Thus hundreds of square miles of Southern Italy now are in American and British hands.

Great Day for Allies

The day was one of the most successful since the Allies started the invasion of Italy, with outstanding gains reported from every sector of the fighting fronts.

"The initiative is full in our hands," said a military spokesman at Allied headquarters, "and the Germans are being driven from mountain positions in most difficult terrain just as they were driven from the Salerno beaches."

The French high command threw the dreaded Moroccan Goums, who terrorized German and Italian troops in Tunisia, into the battle of Corsica which mounted in intensity with the French announcing the capture of Olbia, a town less than seven miles southwest of Bastia, only remaining German stronghold in the northeast sector of the island.

Nazis Fight To Escape

French forces who also captured two other Corsican towns, were driving on Bastia from every side while the Germans tried frantically to get out by sea and air in the face of the Allies' tight blockade.

Although British forces encountered little opposition in their lightning thrusts up the Adriatic coast, Fifth Army troops on the Western side of the mainland met savage resistance in the third day of their northward drive toward Naples but pushed forward another mile and captured three villages.

Two Men Killed in Wreck of Train Carrying German Prisoners to Camp

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va., Sept. 26 (P)—A passenger train carrying German prisoners of war from a port of debarkation to an inland prison camp wrecked near here today, killing the fireman and engineer and injuring a number of the United States military guard and prisoners.

Lieut.-Col. P. J. McGahan of the Third Service Command said that seven enlisted men of the guard unit and two prisoners had been injured badly enough to be taken off the train and to a nearby army hospital. The dead were Jake Pritchett of Charlottesville, fireman, and Engineer Charles L. Dillard, 63, of Charlottesville. Two conductors also were hurt.

The eleven-car train piled up at a point where the road had been under repair and apparently occurred when the locomotive derailed. A baggage car, kitchen car, tourist car and three coaches also jumped the track.

The wreck blocked the single-line right-of-way and Chesapeake and Ohio trains were being routed over the Southern Railway by way of Orange, Va.

The prisoners of war who fought the losing battle of Germany's "new order" had an opportunity to view the rolling country around Shenandoah, Va., boyhood home of Thomas Jefferson, father of American democracy.

You're in This War Too... The Bonds You Buy Prove It

Soviet Bayonets Prodding Nazis Out of Russia

By ELTON C. FAY

The German armies in Russia are on the road back, prodded by Soviet bayonets from the east and summoned by the challenge of Anglo-American power from the west.

There is yet no evidence of a German rout on the Eastern front, although the crack in soldier morale and organization that betokens such military catastrophes may be near.

"According to Plan"

Until the Russians report or the Germans admit the taking of large numbers of Nazi prisoners it must be assumed that the great fall-back of Hitler's armies from the Sea of Azov all the way up the Central and into the Northern front is, as the Germans like to state it, "according to plan" and that in the retreat most of the manpower and the machinery of war is intact.

When great masses of prisoners begin trudging into camp, it means the enemy's organization is breaking up, blocks of his forces are being cut off from support and supply and, hungry and with ammunition gone, are giving up. It means that matters aren't running "according to plan."

Russian force of arms, courage and daring on the part of Red strategists have sent the Nazis staggering back hundreds of miles from the high tide mark of invasion.

But, as Secretary of War Stimson points out, "our success in the Mediterranean has undoubtedly accelerated the German retreat in Russia."

Anglo-American armies are on the European mainland, pressing north along the Italian peninsula. Island by island, the Allies push a half dozen potential springboards for other mainland invasions closer in the Mediterranean from Corsica to the islands off the Balkans. The German garrison of the long Atlantic wall watches for invasion from England—and cries for more manpower.

The manpower for the Atlantic and Mediterranean walls must—and is—coming in great measure from the Eastern front. To drain away troops from there, the Nazis must shorten lines, not in small individual sectors of trench but on broad fronts, hundreds of miles long. But when the front begins to straighten, the Russians push forward another great salient and the process must start all over again.

Current, the process is on the southern and central fronts. The Dnieper has been reached by the Soviets, and, over the weekend, crossed at some points according to the German admission. The broad scale fall-back in the Center and south is leaving German forces manning an extended salient in the north arching over to and including the Leningrad and Finnish fronts. Divisions now urgently needed by the Nazis elsewhere are in that most inactive area.

Rain Hampers Advance

The swift surge of the Russian forces to the west, however, is not without danger. An over-extended supply line is the spectre that haunts the military campaigner. An army moving too fast for food and ammunition must contemplate a counter-attack by an enemy much nearer his supply base. Fall rains are bogging roads for troop transports, trucks and guns. In addition, as the Russian army regains territory it is confronted with the necessity of changing back to wide-gauge rail lines which the Nazis converted during their advance to fit their own rolling stock. Moreover, the Wehrmacht has considerable experience in demobilization.

Shelving of

friendly in their attitude toward Russia. The vast amount of lend-lease material which they have been instrumental in getting to Russia already has given the Soviet government evidence of their cooperative attitude.

Thus the selection of Stettinius and the expected assignment for Harriman seem designed to offset any ill effects that the resignation of Sumner Welles as undersecretary could conceivably have had on Russo-American relations. In some quarters Welles had been endowed with a reputation for being virtually the only consequential friend of Russia in the State department. While officials have heatedly denied this, the president and Secretary Hull had been expected to furnish active evidences of friendly intentions toward Russia.

The situation is critical at this time because the foreign ministers meeting next month is to be followed by a conference among Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin.

Advertising Called Major War Weapon

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26. (AP)—America's advertising was praised by the Commerce department today as "a major weapon of the home front" with vital wartime information its ammunition.

Summarizing what it termed the official attitude of "the government as a whole," the department issued a ninety-six-page booklet declaring that advertising scheduled in all media should be maintained as "a constructive contribution to the war effort."

The booklet is a compilation of letters, articles and other endorsements of advertising by government officials from President Roosevelt down. It is addressed, the department explained, to "those who shortsightedly view advertising as an economic waste in wartime and informs them that the government strongly disagrees with this attitude."

"Every type of available men should be drafted before fathers are taken, in the opinion of the V.F.W. of Maryland. There is a substantial number of men who could and should be drafted before there is a need for taking fathers."

The resolution to be presented reads, in part:

"If the war department, after an exhaustive investigation, scientifically determines that additional men are required for the armed forces, then such men should be drawn from the hundreds of thousands of physically fit youthful men who were unmarried at the time of the enactment of the selective service law, and who are presently employed in war production plants; from the 1,250,000 youngsters who become eighteen years old annually; and from the already overstaffed command service officers and government bureaus."

Farmers Meet Today

John H. Carter, county agent, has announced a meeting of all farmers in this area who will be needing help in digging their potatoes. The meeting will be held in the Oakland high school Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Carter said that many potato growers were finding that help would be necessary to harvest their crop and he hoped a plan could be worked out that night. He has discussed the situation with M. W. Mann, local manager of the United States Employment Service, and also with F. D. Bittie, principal, and O. T. Graser, vo-ag instructor, Oakland high school.

A similar meeting was held in Accident the early part of the week and a plan was worked out between the growers and students in the high school.

"But suppose I don't come back?" said Jack.

"Don't please!" Ruth covered her face again.

"There, there," Jack comforted. "I'll be back."

He handed her the handkerchief again. "Here, keep it." He watched her dab at her eyes, and thought her lovely even when she wept. "If you don't want me to talk any more about marrying you, I won't. It doesn't seem to get me anywhere anyhow."

Ruth smiled and pushed back her disheveled hair.

"You're sweet, Jack," she said. "I honestly wish I could fall so madly in love with you that I'd make you rush me to a minister this very night."

"Thanks," said Jack, "but if wishes were — were Cupids nobody would be single." He started the engine again. "Shall we go back now?"

"I think we'd better," Ruth said.

"It's awfully late—and, as usual, we have a lot before us when morning comes." She paused a moment and then said, "I'll probably have to run the office by myself tomorrow."

"Why so?" said Jack as the car moved.

"Susan Potter's coming down to start the cafeteria work. . . and she'll probably want Adam right at her elbow until things get going."

"Seems funny to think of Susan's working in a factory—even in a cafeteria."

"I don't think it's a bit funny," said Ruth. "I think it's going to be a nuisance. Something tells me it's just a fad with Susan, and she'll tire after she has everything upset and everything disorganized."

"But I thought organizing was what she was going to do."

"It is—only—oh, well, there's no need crossing bridges."

"How do you know Susan Potter isn't being patriotic?" said Jack. "Maybe she wants to feel she's helping—just as you feel."

"Maybe so," said Ruth. "But what about Bill?"

"All right, what about him?"

"How's Susan going to look after him and her home, if she works in the factory during the day and rehearses in the evenings?"

"I wouldn't know. Anyway, it's her problem, not yours."

Just then a car without lights dashed out from a seldom-used road, and Jack had to give his speeding wheel a quick turn to avoid being hit.

"Well, I'll be darned!" he exclaimed.

"What happened?" said Ruth, picking herself up from the floor, where she had fallen.

"That car! Didn't you see it?"

"No," said Ruth. "All I know is you nearly ran into that ditch and knocked the breath right out of me."

"Sorry. Are you hurt?"

"I don't think so. I can tell you better in the morning."

"I wonder what that car was doing in that old road," Jack said, brightening his headlights so that he could see the rear end of the vehicle that was speeding down the

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

Neither Ruth nor Jack spoke for some time. They just sat there in the car listening to the small night noises about them—noises that were hard to define; little mysterious whisperings, chattering, and rustlings, as though some tiny race of humans was bustling about, planning, scheming. And as Jack listened, he thought of all the other young men who were sitting in cars with their girls—some in uniforms some soon to be in uniform. And all of them planning, or begging, or wondering—a little confused, uncertain about the future of the world as well as their own futures. Boy meets girl—all over the world. Boy says goodbye to the girl—all over the world. Maybe they'll come back, those fellows—maybe not. But none of them wanting to shirk. All of them, like himself, knowing that their futures would be even more uncertain if they didn't get out and do something about the unholy mess.

He turned to Ruth, held her close for a moment.

"Anyway, sweetheart," he said huskily, "you can't keep me from hoping. Maybe you're right about not marrying, but something tells me we ought to be as nearly normal in times like these as we can—And a fellow's wanting to marry the girl he loves is certainly normal."

"Of course it is. And I am glad you feel that way, Jack. Only — only I think waiting might be better for us both," Ruth continued.

"Feeling uncertain about you, Jack — and still experiencing what you call a hangover from a schoolgirl crush where Adam's concerned — I think we ought to wait until you come back."

"But suppose I don't come back?" said Jack.

"Don't please!" Ruth covered her face again.

"There, there," Jack comforted. "I'll be back."

He handed her the handkerchief again. "Here, keep it." He watched her dab at her eyes, and thought her lovely even when she wept. "If you don't want me to talk any more about marrying you, I won't. It doesn't seem to get me anywhere anyhow."

Ruth smiled and pushed back her disheveled hair.

"You're sweet, Jack," she said. "I honestly wish I could fall so madly in love with you that I'd make you rush me to a minister this very night."

"Thanks," said Jack, "but if wishes were — were Cupids nobody would be single." He started the engine again. "Shall we go back now?"

Illegal Killing Of Deer Reported Near Deep Creek

Games Officials Find Hides and Heads of Doe and Fawn

OAKLAND, Sept. 26.—That there are evidences of much illegal killing of deer in the county recently was announced by Elmer Haulenbeck deputy game warden.

Haulenbeck related that while patrolling for squirrel hunters the other day with Fulcher P. Smith, of the Game and Inland Fish Commission, they drove into the Thousand Acre tract of land, situated near the headwaters of Deep Creek lake, and noticed a well-used car track road through a field.

Deciding to investigate they found where two deer had been killed and following the track left by dragging the deer out, found, at the edge of the woods, where the deer had been dressed. The hides and heads showed a doe and a fawn, he said, and added that evidently buckshot had been used in the killing. From the condition of the hides he estimated the killing had been very recent.

He pointed out that this was the time of year when illegal killing of deer occurs and declared that wardens were on the lookout for cars using spotlights, especially around buckwheat fields and localities where herds of deer abound.

"We've left the wishful thinking up to Hitler"

Arthur T. Bower

Arthur Bower tried to look unconcerned, but he couldn't help grinning like a brand new father as the news spread among the men in the plant. His oldest son had just been made Foreman of his department, had become his father's boss at Revere. From now on Arthur Jr. would set the pace in making copper and brass munitions parts, not only for his father, but for his two younger brothers in the plant.

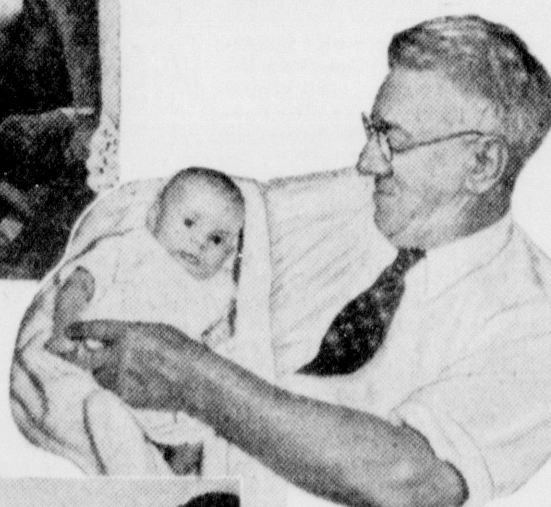

For Arthur Bower, the promotion of his son fulfilled an ambition that had grown since the day, twenty years before, when he had come with Revere Copper and Brass Incorporated as a skilled machinist.

Brought to this country as a child from Nova Scotia, and cast on his own resources in his teens, he had been determined that his children should have what he had missed. And any father could feel proud of the attractive, comfortable home he had provided for five daughters and four sons. Of the good clothes, the piano and radio, the big modern kitchen for the girls. And the education, the start in life, he had been able to give them all.

No one needs to explain to Arthur Bower that these are the things in his life that our enemies would crush. Like each of us, he knows that this war is personal, that Hitler is striking at him. That is why he urges his machine to work faster, why he and his sons pool all their skill to make flawless copper and brass parts. They know that Hitler said Americans were soft . . . they are sending him their answer in hot metal.

Between you and Arthur Bower there is a closer connection than you know. Before the war he made print rolls, cylinders of copper from which printed fabrics receive their beautiful colored patterns. Partly through his skill our homes are brightened with charming curtains, women have stunning dresses to wear. And because American freedom of enterprise brings mutual benefits, your use of copper has helped to give Arthur Bower and his sons the security and happiness we all are fighting for today.

Tax Simplification
A Crying Need

AN URGENT DUTY now facing congressmen is that of simplifying the federal income tax returns. A Washington correspondent reports that members found out during their vacations back home that the people are willing to "grin and bear" a heavy tax burden to pay for the war effort but are "howling their heads off" about the complicated and confusing forms they now have to fill out.

It is no wonder. Tax simplification was needed before the latest taxes were levied, but now the need is crying. Many persons now have to hire a lawyer or a tax expert to make their returns, and when even congressmen who took part in devising the new taxes confess they had to do so, certainly there is need for the reform.

Many of the complexities are, of course, the result of the transition from the old system to the current payment plan. But since that will have come into effect this year, these can well be eliminated, as, for example, the necessity for filling out a separate schedule for the Victory tax.

Moved by the general complaint, the House Ways and Means committee has taken up a study of possible simplification and Chairman Doughton reports that some progress has already been made to this end, which is welcome news.

Some other things were also heard about taxes by the congressmen during their vacations. One was that most of their constituents can be expected to yell bloody murder if the administration plan to impose twelve billions of additional taxes upon them. That is pretty good indication that the saturation point in federal taxation has about been reached. They also heard a general demand for elimination of waste and extravagance. Herein Congress should find a big easement of the revenue raising problem.

No Winter Relief
For the Madman

THE NAZI HIGH COMMAND can look forward to nothing but difficulties in the months to come. On the Russian front the Soviet armies are throwing everything they have at the Germans and it is now obvious that the Germans have suffered a catastrophic defeat on that front.

By the time the autumn rains bog down the mobile units, the Germans will be lucky to be holding anywhere on the Dnieper river line. But while they can hope for a breathing spell of a sort on the Russian front, it will be short lived and the Nazis have vivid memories of what the Reds have done to them in the past during the winter months. And only trouble looms for the Nazis in the South.

The Nazis can not permit the Americans and British to storm through the Italian peninsula unimpeded and the Germans are staking tens of thousands of men on holding Northern Italy. There will be no autumn rains to bog down that area and Hitler can expect only bad news from that front. With the Balkan situation growing more explosive every hour, there is only trouble for the Germans there, too.

And weather will have little effect on the daily bombings of Germany and German-held territory. Tons of explosives will continue to pour down on Nazi installations and factories and cities. There will be no reforming of lines for Adolf Hitler this winter. All he can do now is struggle against the inevitable. The madman is finally in a strait jacket.

Federal Invaders

REPORTS from key states indicate that hordes of New Deal federal officeholders have been sent in to bolster the anticipated tumble in President Roosevelt's vote in the next national election.

New Jersey reports, according to the New Jersey Taxpayers' Association, that the number of federal payrollers has increased to 65,000, compared to only 13,500 state workers. Ohio, which has 25,000 state employees, is saddled with over 90,000 government workers; Pennsylvania with 215,000. Other key sections report large increases. And still they come.

Established agencies are adding to their staffs almost daily; new agencies are being created, apart from the war, spreading their potential tentacles across the nation. Local self-government is being undermined.

The following words of the Founding Fathers, who wrote the Declaration of Independence, are as apt today as they were when written:

"He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance."

In fairness, the question naturally arises, will the New Deal dare to use these millions of government employees for fourth term purposes? And the answer to that is found in the report of the special election investigating committee of the Senate in 1938. The three Democratic senators and one Republican made the following report:

"The committee believes that funds appropriated by the Congress for the relief of those in need and distress have been in many instances diverted from these high purposes to political ends."

Old dogs perform the same old tricks.

They Are Still John,
Jim, Joe and Ed

THIS WAR has reached a stage where all communities begin to feel deeply the human sacrifices which are indispensable to victory. Nearly every day, this newspaper carries the news of one or more boys from this area listed as missing or killed in action—and the list of casualties will increase before it begins to taper off.

Tragic as these War department notices are, they do bring home the meaning of war in a very personal way. Instead of thinking in terms of numbers—divisions, regiments, companies, privates—we think of these casualties as John and Jim, Joe and Ed. They are boys who lived, played and worked among us. Most of them were graduated from one of the area high schools. Maybe they were on one of the athletic teams.

Maybe they were studious or social or retiring. Anyway, they belonged here. They were the boys next door, and they had dates and drank sodas and went to the movies just as the younger groups are doing today.

They are our contribution to the struggle for security and freedom. Not that we gave them—they gave themselves for us. And whatever we enjoy as fruits of victory we shall owe to them, for they are winning the war just as truly as are the boys from Sacramento, from St. Louis, from Cincinnati or from Portland. It took them all to make the army of democracy. Every single one of them is winning the victory, for without each one there could be no certainty of victory.

In the days to come, there will be more gold stars in the service flags, more names on scrolls of honor, more posthumous medals and citations. But never let the personalities get lost in the symbols. They are still John, Jim, Joe and Ed, real people whom we knew and loved.

New Yorkers thought the red coupons in their ration book called for meat, but upon presenting them to the butcher, nothing happened.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Whoever Bucklin Moon may be outside the cover of a book he has just written, you may be sure that he is a man of clean and honest understanding. He knows the laughter of the human heart and he knows its secret tortures. If he were otherwise he could not have written "The Darker Brother" (Doubleday Doran), a fine novel of the negro in these times in which he with sympathy and respect tells the story of a negro lad named Ben and his girl Birdie.

Ben Johnson is a little boy of the South as the story begins, a little boy about to move to New York with Essie Mae, his mother. She did not know then that there was racial prejudice against the negro even in the North. But little Ben learned on his very first day in school and was never allowed to forget it. He grows older and suffers.

He learns how unstable life can be for a darker brother. His uncle Rafe is killed by racketeers. His mother and sister are drowned when an excursion steamer rolls over and sinks. His perilous, embittered friend Slick is killed in a stolen car. He joins the army, is sent South, and his friend Slack, surrendering a life that had become intolerable, hangs himself. His dear friend Birdie, back home, is discharged from her position as maid, on a false charge of thievery and for a little while goes on the street.

He is home on leave on December 7, 1941—and on that day the story ascends to a nobler level.

Robert Nathan's gift for the gently fantastic is without superior or peer in American literature. . . . and his latest story, "But Gently Day" (Kopf) is no exception. As the little novel opens a great army plane is flying low through a storm over a New England hill. It crashes and all are killed. Early the next morning a young soldier, Corporal Arkerster is walking on a lonely forest path to the farm on which he has always lived. He meets a chaplain (or he seems to be one) and the two of them walk together to meet the boy's mother and father. When they come to the place the boy finds it oddly changed. It is all familiar, but of another generation. . . . and slowly he realizes that he has gone back to another age, shortly after the Civil war, and that these persons are his forefathers and mothers. . . . as troubled in their hearts, as worried about the future. There is a love story beneath the theme, but the tale that Robert Nathan tells is the old one about the great powers of man, and his great defeat, his conquest of the earth and his failure to use the power of love and the power in their own hearts.

A popular book in our house is Charlotte Jackson's "Roger and the Fishes" (Dodd Mead), a delightfully fantastic story of a small boy named Roger and his dream of playing around with the fishes in a high California Sierra lake.

You should read Katherine Brush's "Out of My Mind" (Doubleday Doran) for a perfect refresher course in human relations. The lady is bright and gay and wise as well and her book is a guaranteed pick-up for the spirits. . . . Enough from Marsh Maslin.

Tobacco Growers
Go on Warpath
Against the OPA

By CENTRAL PRESS

WASHINGTON—The much-battered Office of Price Administration probably will be getting some pretty hard slaps from southern tobacco growers when congress reconvenes.

Government price fixers recently ordered South Carolina growers to grade and tie their crops if they wanted to market them at prevailing prices.

Now tobacco grading is a tedious job and tying the bundles with the final leaf requires considerable skill. And with the manpower situation what it is, the South Carolina growers faced a problem. The way those close enough to the Georgia border solved it was to take their tobacco to Georgia markets, where the requirements did not prevail.

In addition to this incident, OPA rejected personal pleas by several senators and governors for a four-cent increase in ceiling prices on some grades. The OPA feared it would boost the price of cigarettes. Tobacco men replied, "The war has boosted our costs—so what?"

Farm Labor Tightener

Watch for an attempt by War Manpower Chief Paul McNutt to tighten up on farm labor deferments.

Sources close to McNutt say he may increase deferment standards for farmers on the ground that agriculture is now getting a disproportionate break.

Any move in this direction, however, undoubtedly will meet with strong resistance from the "farm bloc" in Congress, since farmers insist they are just getting by with the labor they now have and any reduction in the farm labor force would curtail food production.

Draft Convictions Up

Convictions for the violation of the draft act rose sharply after Pearl Harbor. Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, recently informed President Roosevelt.

Convictions for failure to register, failure to report for induction, failure to return questionnaire, etc., totaled 2,847 for the first year of the war as compared with 627 for the entire peacetime year of draft operations.

Civilian Needs Needed

War Production Board is giving more attention to the needs of civilians.

In the last week it made available more shotgun and rifle ammunition to farmers, ranchers and hunters to enable them to keep down predatory animals, and it made more glass jars available to coffee distributors.

Four Star Billing

The marine corps and coast guard are the only services that do not have a chief who wears the four stars of a full admiral or general (excepting the WACS, WAVES and SPARS) and servicemen are wondering when those two chiefs will be given four stars.

Lieut. Gen. Thomas C. Holcomb, marine corps commandant, wears three stars. His marines have done outstanding jobs in the Pacific war, Guadalcanal, for instance. By Jan. 1, there will be about 400,000 marines, and down to the last man they think Holcomb rates a full generalship.

Waesche Also

Vice Admiral Russell R. Waesche, head of the coast guard, has three stars. His men have performed excellently both as off shore patrols and in manning invasion boats under heavy fire in the Pacific and European war theaters. Several months ago, a bill was introduced in Congress to give both men the full four-star rank, but it was side-tracked.

Maybe the measure can be revived in the next Congress. It will be if friends of Holcomb and Waesche can persuade the law-makers.

Cause and Effect

From the Charleston, W. Va., Daily Mail

Life magazine in a recent series of articles by John K. Jessup, chairman of a committee of the magazine's editors who have been studying America's present and postwar problems for two years, has made it quite plain that some of the issues facing us at the moment are a bad tax structure, too many restrictions on the investment of private capital, the farmer is still regarded as an object of government charity and the anti-trust laws have not been enforced with "consistency and system."

Out of this study of these problems, Mr. Jessup has come to the conclusion that this country of 1,300,000,000 people of less than eight persons and of 6,000,000 farmers who, with their families, comprise one fourth of the population, has to return to the free American system which guaranteed every man a better place in the sun than his own father—provided, he wanted it badly enough to work hard for it.

On this score, Mr. Jessup says:

"An unfree system, however seemingly efficient, is unnatural to Americans. Others are better at that game than we are and always will be. The thing that made us strong was freedom and if we are still serious about it, it will make us stronger."

How bold and truthful are these words! They are words which temporarily went out of fashion when the New Deal came in the door with its NIRA, its dole and its consuming passion to make every citizen the subject of a suffocating political paternalism whose roots lay in Washington. Now, under the stresses of war when the fight for existence has been made possible through the operation of the very system which the bright young men in Washington held in contempt and openly derided, an appreciation for the American system of free enterprise may be coming back into favor.

It has taken the test of war and the utter disillusionment with the attempt to superimpose totalitarianism upon a democratic foundation to awaken the people. They are awake now and every American soldier who is going about his duties on foreign battlefields has gotten some idea of what he is fighting for; a world, we suggest, without trace of Mr. Wallace's Century of the Common man and containing all of the classic features of the free America in the tradition of the founding fathers.

A Good Start

From the Pittsburgh Press

The news that well-integrated plans for smoothing the transition of discharged service men from military to civilian life already are in operation, is reassuring—particularly to those men and their families.

The Veterans Employment Service, the U. S. Veterans Administration, the Red Cross, Selective Service-reemployment committees, and the several veterans' organizations, such as the Legion and VFW, are co-operating in lending all possible assistance to the men who already are veterans of World War II.

They are taken first to make sure the discharged men are fully informed of the rights and privileges to which they are entitled by law in finding re-employment, and, where necessary, active participation in the job hunt is undertaken by one or more of the agencies listed.

Apparently the system is well coordinated and functioning satisfactorily thus far. Its big job lies far in the future, however, when the number of returning veterans will soar into the millions—when the war is won. It's all to the good, therefore, that an early start has been made, so an experienced and efficient set-up will be available when the big need for it arrives.

Morning Motto

Eyes will not see when the heart wishes them to be blind. Desire conceals truth, as darkness does the earth.—SENECA.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26—Republican congressmen were looking forward to Ohio Governor Bricker's address on Constitution day in Philadelphia to revive his campaign for the Republican presidential campaign.

But the talk failed to attract the attention expected, and some authorities are beginning to wonder if the Bricker campaign will be formidable.

If Bricker does not run, Senator Taft will be released from his promise to avoid a contest in Ohio, and no doubt be drafted by his friends to seek the Ohio delegates. Taft has been intending to run for re-election to the Senate next year, and there has been no organization working in his behalf in a presidential way.

It is not too late for Bricker. There was some talk earlier from Ohio that new publicity advisers with more experience in national campaigns, were looking toward getting started in January.

But the Philadelphia speech rang no bells, and, unless Bricker wants to make a fight for the Ohio delegation solely as a favorite son candidate rather than as front ranking national candidate, he may give way to the Ohio senator. Strong pressure, is coming no doubt, from Taft's followers in Ohio and elsewhere to put him up with the big two now considered in the running, Dewey first; Wilkie second.

Surrender Softening Urged

Some of the liberal leaders like Socialist Norman Thomas have been calling for what they call "the right sort of peace offensive" by us, thinking that if we offer more attractive inducements than unconditional surrender, the Germans might lay down their arms. Even some of the OWI propaganda lately has supplied that inference or at least taken a less determined stand.

The only kind of propaganda that will be effective upon the Germans will be strong propaganda such as they tried on us. It could be well dinned into the German ears day after day.

"You are defeated. You are defeated, you cannot win. Every day you delay termination of this war, you are adding to the bombed destruction of your country and costing lives of your citizens."

That is what the clever Goebbels would be doing to us if the situation were reversed.

Appeasement Futile

The reason why appeasement can hardly be successful in any event is that the German army and Nazi leaders all know their lives and jobs will go as soon as the peace comes, and they are carrying on their shoulders the responsibility of continuing the fight for their own selfish purposes.

Mr. Thomas, of course, spoke not actually in the vein toward this kind of appeasement, but in favor of promulgating an international document against imperialism and a trend toward an international police force.

But the "right sort of peace offensive" would be one designed to break the morale of the German leaders by the utmost aggressive publicity campaigning over the international radio and in the press, telling them daily "you cannot win."

Peace Resolution Compromise

Republican leader McNary, the Mackinac conference leader, Senator Vandenberg, and the administration leader, Barkley, have just about agreed among themselves to pass a compromise resolution on postwar. It will not be a world state, a quart of milk, or anything along that line, but a roundly worded simple resolution, promising, as the Fulbright House pledge does:

"The creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and maintain a just and lasting peace."

This, of course, could mean anything or nothing. Its only real meaning is that neither side wants to join the fight on the issue at this time and provoke a sharp national and Senate debate. Senators Nye, Hiram Johnson and Wheeler, did not join in this compromise arrangement between the big three, and there may be some dispute, but nothing much more serious than the overwhelming 360 to 29 vote in the House.

A Needed
Rebuke

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

A federal district court judge at Chicago has laid down a rule of procedure governing government bureaus which was long overdue. Counsel for the OPA had ordered a group of wholesale meat dealers to appear before an OPA examiner. The dealers demanded an open hearing and counsel, and when refused terminated the proceedings with an appeal to federal court.

In refusing to compel the defendants to attend what he described as a "star-chamber session," the court held that the statute under which OPA functions did not invest it with the powers of a grand jury, and that in the absence of such power

Senate Is Seen
Needing Facts
For Peace Move

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—Senator Connally, Democrat, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, reflects the sentiment of the Senate when he says that no action should be taken for the present on the Fulbright resolution which passed the House of Representatives by an overwhelming vote earlier this week.

The Senate is by no means united on postwar objectives and any debate at this time would necessarily raise questions as to the intentions of each of the United Nations and especially Britain, Russia and the United States.

The Foreign Relations committee members feel that no good purpose would be served by the debate and that it might produce irritations. This alone is not a sufficient reason, because if there is one thing that needs to be debated it is the war or peace aims of the Allied powers.

Perhaps a more persuasive reason is that the Senate, which by the terms of the constitution is supposed to advise and consent to international agreements, does not know what the executive branch of the government has in mind. To attempt to furnish advice ahead of time and before the mind of the executive is disclosed is likely to produce embarrassments for the Senate, if not the executive branch of the government.

Russian Intentions Known

Thus, for instance, the president and the department of State know at this moment something of Russia's intentions. Admiral Standley, who has just come back from Moscow, presumably brings the latest information as to Premier Stalin's point of view. A three-power conference is scheduled to take place soon, at which the ideas of Russia, Britain and the United States will be crystallized. Until such an exchange of views takes place, the Senate is in the dark concerning postwar aims or plans.

There is little known, also, as to what Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt have agreed upon. What, for instance, is to be Britain's view about freedom for India and is Britain planning to annex the lost territories of the former Italian empire? If these areas are to be put under international trusteeship, what provision is to be made about ultimate ownership or is the "mandate" idea to be used as camouflage annexation?

Who Gets Islands?

There is also the question of America's territorial desires. Are the mandated islands in the Pacific, when wrested from Japan, to be internationalized or are they to be given to the United States as air and naval bases? This may be objected to as "imperialism," and yet it is illogical to suggest that, because the British already are committed to imperialism, they alone should be permitted to have such islands.

Also, the question of bases in the Atlantic is up for settlement and any blanket statements about territories, or boundaries, either in the two big oceans or in continental Europe, could conceivably breed friction and disunity among the Allies in the midst of war.

Finally, there is the question of an "international police force" and a "super-state." The Republicans seem to imply that the president and his associates favor a "super state" and a single international police force. There is as yet no foundation for such a conclusion.

League Idea Indicated

The Republicans speak often of retention of "sovereignty" and of postwar action to be taken, as indicated in the Fulbright resolution, by "constitutional processes." If that's what they really mean, then logically they should support the adoption of the League of Nations covenant which gave each nation freedom of action to determine its contribution to the common cause on the outbreak of war by an aggressor nation. The league preserved "sovereignty" and provided for action by "constitutional processes."

It certainly would be a strange turn of affairs if, after two decades or more, the Republicans who helped to reject the league covenant were to be found to be its political sponsors. But stranger things than that have happened in our political history and as for European statesmen, they will accept any form of international organization in which they can be sure the physical might as well as moral influence of the United States will be exerted to maintain the peace of the world.

(Reproduction Rights Reserved)

the OPA could not impose closed sessions. While the supreme court has not yet acted on this question, it is inconceivable that that tribunal will sanction the vicious practice of conducting legal actions in secret over the protest of defendants. One of the worst features of the alarming expansion of administrative law in this country was removed when provision was made for appeal to the courts from decisions of administrators. Now, if the open court is upheld, much of the compulsion and secrecy which have surrounded the application of administrative law will have been removed. And for this the country can be thankful.

"Tex" O'Brien Learns About Torpedoes

Co-starring with Jim Newill in the second of the P.R.C. "Texas Rangers" westerns, Dave "Tex" O'Brien had a painful experience doing a battle with the outlaws in "Bad Men of Thunder Gap." The film comes to the Embassy theater tomorrow.

In this scene, O'Brien has the outlaws shooting at him as he crouches behind a rock. One of the shots was a small torpedo used for the pictorial explosive effect. The torpedo ricocheted, and particles hit Dave on the face, narrowly missing his eye.

He got a pretty bad scratch, and covering it up, hurried to the make-up man and got some first-aid, and then a neat job of make-up to camouflage the bruised spot.

"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T TRIP YOURSELF

There is just one purpose to a high original suit bid—what is usually known as a pre-emptive bid. It is to shut out opponents that you reckon are likely otherwise to find a fit between their hands and get into a game contract which they can make. Experienced players have found that this device does not pay with hands strong enough to justify a normal opening bid of one. There are two reasons for that. In the first place, when you hold such a hand, with its share of defensive values, the opponents are not likely to be able to make a game. On the contrary, your high bid may shut your own side out of finding a fit at a successful game contract.

And naturally that contract was made right on the nose, with the loss of no tricks except to the two black aces.

But the real point of the deal is not in what did happen, but what could have happened. South was seriously considering an original pre-emptive bid of 4 Hearts. If he had made that, North would have passed and left him in, reckoning that his own strength might prove just enough to render the contract makeable. South, according to the rule for such bids, had sufficient total playing strength, within three of the number of tricks for which he would have been bidding. His refusal to bid that way was that his hand was not weak enough in high card strength.

With his club honors on the side, and the top two honors in hearts, his hand might be able to do its share in preventing a game if bid by the opponents. Also it might have proved very valuable in a No Trump contract, if North had the cards to justify such a declaration. Third, with a four-card length in a suit unit, it was possible that suit might be a better declaration, which proved to be the case.

(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

What is the best bidding by North and South on this deal, to picture their suit lengths accurately?

Forcing Victory Garden Rhubarb in the Cellar

By DEAN HALLIDAY

There is much interest this fall in cellar gardening and many victory gardeners will try their luck with it. Rhubarb is one of the vegetables from the Victory garden that is easy to force and therefore it merits a place in a cellar garden.

Rhubarb roots used for forcing should be at least two years old and if even older roots are used the resultant yield is apt to be larger. Roots to be used for forcing should be dug up late in the fall. They are left out-of-doors until they have experienced a light freezing. After this they can be forced in any room or cellar having a temperature of 50-60 degrees.

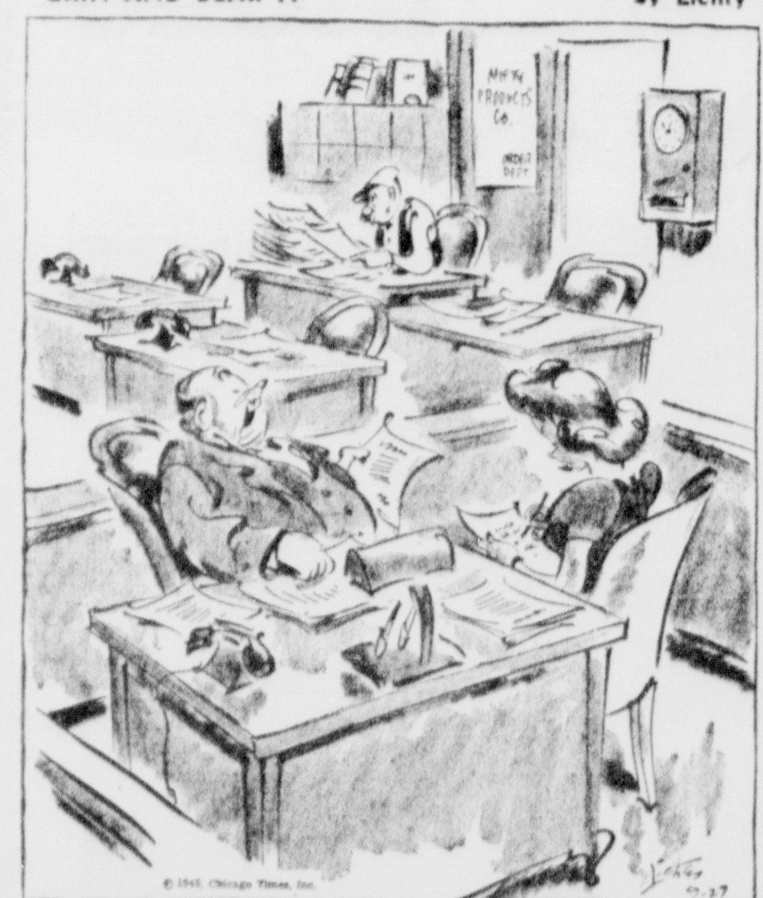

The lifted crowns may be packed in large pots or boxes with soil between them to fill in the spaces. Give the crowns a good watering and later if they appear to be drying off too much give them additional light sprayings of water. Good stalks should be available in four to six weeks. As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, the leaf-blades do not develop on forced rhubarb.

Early crops of rhubarb are also available by covering the crowns in the opening ground with a barrel, as illustrated, and mulching around it with a thick layer of fresh stable manure to provide warmth. The barrel protects the tender rhubarb sprouts from the wind and cold. The open tops of the barrel permits the sun rays to reach the rhubarb and under these conditions its growth is forced by many weeks.

Judging of Fair Exhibits Starts Tuesday Morning

Today at 6 p. m. Is Entry Deadline; Judges Are Announced

Judging of exhibits at the Cumberland fair will get under way tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and those desiring to share the cash premiums are urged to have their entries at the exhibition hall at Fairgo by 6 p. m. today, Miss Maude A. Bean, home demonstration agent of Allegany county, announced last evening.

Miss Bean stressed the fact that competition in the household department is open to women and girls from any city or state. There are special departments, however, for 4-H boys and girls exhibits and a special department for children under eighteen years of age.

Entries Slow Coming In
Entries have been slow in coming in this year, Miss Bean admitted, but she expressed the hope that there will be a good response from exhibitors by the time the deadline is reached this evening.

All girls who are not 4-H members are eligible for premiums in the children's department. Premiums will be offered in two classifications, namely, work of those under ten years of age and work of girls ten to eighteen years, inclusive.

Rules of the household department specify that all canned and preserved goods must be exhibited in standard containers of clear glass, quart or pint sizes, and jelly in one half pint glasses with lids. All canned and preserved goods must have been put up since the 1942 Cumberland fair.

All plain and fancy sewing must have been done during 1942-43, all fancy articles, embroidery, crocheting, weaving and knitting must have been made by the exhibitor during the last three years. Rugs and quilts must have been completed within the last five years. Goods will not be accepted if exhibited at the Cumberland fair prior to this year.

Judges Are Named
Miss Dorothy Emerson, girls' club agent of the University of Maryland, and Miss Mildred Barton Hoffman, home demonstration agent for Garrett county, will judge all of the home economics exhibits at Fairgo, Miss Bean announced.

Judging in the livestock, poultry, pigeon and pet stock departments and the honey and wax exhibits also is scheduled to begin tomorrow morning at 9 a. m., according to Ralph R. McHenry, county agent.

"Uncle Jerry" Conover, specialist in dairy husbandry of the University of Maryland, will come here to judge the livestock, also exhibits of the 4-H club while Milo S. Downey, state 4-H club leader, will determine the premium winners in the 4-H poultry division.

Judging of the bee culture exhibit will be done by George J. Abrams, apiculturist of the University of Maryland.

Fruits and vegetables will be judged by A. P. Vierheller, of the state university's horticulture department.

Exhibits for the poultry, pigeon and pet stock department, always one of the big features of the Cumberland fair, will be received at Fairgo until 8 p. m. today. H. C. Weber, of Hagerstown, will start judging in this department tomorrow morning.

Two local girls, Gladys Gordon, 10, of 25 Offutt street, and Doris Miller, 11, of 26 Elder street, who police said were missing from early Saturday afternoon, turned up at the home of the Miller girl's sister in Harrisburg, Pa., police reported last evening.

Parents of the girls asked police to find the girls yesterday after they failed to turn up Saturday evening. Police were told the mothers of the girls sent them to town to pay some bills, and that they used the money to purchase bus tickets to Harrisburg.

A telephone call from Mr. Miller's sister in Harrisburg last evening ended the search.

Hoenicka Urges Fire Prevention Week Observance

Chief Asks Co-operation in Elimination of Common Home Fire Hazards

All citizens are urged by Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka to take part in the observance of Fire Prevention Week, which will be held from October 3 to 9 in Cumberland and in thousands of other communities throughout the nation.

"The fire department is, as always, ready to come with immediate help should a fire break out anywhere in Cumberland," Chief Hoenicka stated, "but the war has imposed a strain on our department as well as on all other phases of civilian life. We are experiencing a manpower problem as are many industries and farms. We are also eager to eliminate needless calls so that at least a part of our men and equipment can be held on tap at all times to meet any wartime emergency that may arise."

"For all these reasons, and because even our best efforts cannot totally save or in any way replace a house that is consumed by flames before we are notified, we urge all citizens to co-operate with us in the elimination of common home fire hazards during Fire Prevention week."

"We further recommend that every family delegate at least one member to learn how to turn in an alarm accurately and without delay should fire break out despite all precautions. Many times the alarm comes in too late to be effective or is transmitted in such a garbled manner that the department is not informed of the exact location of the fire."

Speaking of common fire hazards on the home front, Chief Hoenicka made the following recommendations:

"That heating plants from furnace to chimney should be thoroughly cleaned and checked by an expert for defects."

"That flammable wooden roofs should be covered over with non-combustible, fire-retardant roofing material because wooden roofs cause a third of all America's residential fires."

"Electrical equipment should always be disconnected immediately after wiring. Only appliances bearing the approved label of the Underwriters' Laboratories should be purchased."

"Gasoline should never be used for home dry cleaning. The latent destructive power of a pint of gasoline has been likened to a pound of dynamite, and the friction created by rubbing cloth together is enough to ignite the fumes."

"Accumulations of rubbish, old furniture, mattresses and the like in closets or basements not only are a prey to spontaneous ignition, but feed fire-starting from other sources."

"Keep your matches in a safe place out of reach of small children. Cigarettes, smoking pipe embers and matches should always be completely extinguished before they are discarded. Plenty of ash trays are a good prevention measure."

"To be effective such preventative measures should not only be inaugurated during Fire Prevention week but also continued without relaxation through the year," the Cumberland fire chief concluded.

Moose Lodge Holds Dinner in Honor of Band Members

Organization Has Given Nineteen Concerts in Cumberland Area

In recognition of its services during the summer months, the Moose band was honored at a dinner meeting last night by Cumberland Lodge No. 271, L.O.O.M., at the Moose home.

The only local concert organization available for public ceremonies and entertainments, the Moose band gave nineteen concerts at honor roll dedications and weekly city presentations in various sections of town and participated in three parades. It has been selected to play at the dedication of the Allegany county honor roll memorial at the city hall on Armistice day.

Governor Frank J. Davis, master of ceremonies at the Moose dinner, presented E. J. Clark, president of the band, who acknowledged on behalf of the band personnel the support the lodge has given and expressed his appreciation to the band members for their loyalty and help.

The band members, eleven of whom are now in the armed services, were presented and remarks were also made by Joseph Morton, band director. Mayor Thomas P. Conlon spoke of the gratitude the entire city felt toward the organization for the thirteen local and six county programs it had given entirely on a voluntary basis. In recognition of this service, he said that he would ask the city council to authorize a donation of music for its use.

Nelson W. Rusler, who furnished gratis sound apparatus for the concert, praised the band's record. Last night's program also included several accordion solos by youthful Martha Norris, of Cresapton, who appeared with band on most of its programs. Charles Pettie, prelate, opened the meeting with the invocation.

REPUBLICANS OF FIVE COUNTIES PLAN DISTRICT ORGANIZATION

McKeldin Hits Sunpapers for "a Lie" and Tait Flays New Deal at Gathering of State Central Committees Here

Climaxing a full day of entertainment and discussion, Republican State Central committees of the five counties in the Sixth Maryland congressional district took steps Saturday night at the All Ghana country club toward the formation of a district organization.

The counties comprise Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Frederick and Montgomery.

A resolution was unanimously adopted providing that each committee of the district appoint a representative on a Sixth district committee to meet at an early date to draw up and submit to the county committees plans for "organizing and increasing the service of the Republican party to the people of the Sixth district of Maryland."

Three other resolutions adopted endorsed the declarations on foreign and domestic policy adopted unanimously by the Republican Postwar Advisory Council September 7 at Mackinac Island; the statement of general Maryland Republican policy by State Chairman Galen L. Tait in an address to the Republican members of the General Assembly January 5, and the statement of denial of alleged Republican isolationism issued this summer by him.

Organization Plans Promoted
The action followed a dinner at the country club at which policies were discussed and organization plans promoted with addresses by the honor guests, Mayor Theodore L. McKeldin, of Baltimore; Galen L. Tait, the state chairman; Representative J. Glenn Beall and William L. Geppert, editor of The Cumberland News.

In the course of his address, in which he complimented Allegany Republicans for their foresight in thus early planning for the coming campaign battle, McKeldin lashed out at the Baltimore Sunpapers and exorated them for recently publishing the declaration that he was attempting to raise his own salary, which he characterized as "a lie."

"The only salary increases advocated in my budget," the mayor declared, "were raises for the firemen," adding that in doing so he was merely fulfilling his campaign promise. "Any one with common sense should know that such a step by me as charged would be suicidal," the mayor said.

Deficit Cleaned Up
Among other things mentioned in a recount of recent events resulting in his election as mayor, McKeldin noted that when he entered office he was confronted with a deficit of $1,450,000, which he had already cleaned up.

The mayor advised Republicans to be alert on the home front, emphasizing that every effort there is important and should be undertaken cheerfully with the purpose of doing a good job.

After recounting his political connection with this district, and suggesting a district organization, Chairman Tait vigorously denounced the New Deal and noted four factors, issues, that must be considered this year.

These are that there is no division between the parties over the vigorous waging of the war; that it must be ascertained how far into the international field, of given power, this administration will go; domestic policy and the fourth factor.

Bureaucracy Assailed
"We have now a swollen arrogant, ignorant and very numerous bureaucracy," Tait said, "which overrides the Congress, threatens states' rights and seems to seek the overthrow of free enterprise."

"Another factor now present but absent after the last war is bureaucracy's blood brother, the New Deal. From 1932 to 1940, it failed miserably with all its nostrums, its quackery, its boondoggling and its lavish waste of public money to end the depression, banish unemployment, balance the budget and establish a normal governmental administration. It was only the vast preparation for our national defense which relieved our economy of the burdens of unemployment."

Noting that isolationism had vanished, Tait scored the opposition for seeking to make this a Republican failing and ignoring the fact that the parents of isolationism were the neutrality and embargo acts passed since the 1933 election.

by a Democratic Congress and signed by the present Democratic president. "Having thus recanted their former beliefs," he added, "this opposition is very intolerant of those who came a little later to the mourner's bench."

Conference Unites Party
In noting that there is now no division between the parties over prosecuting the war, Tait pointed out that the recent Mackinac Island Republican policy conference, "with its safe and prudent resolutions, has united all Republicans upon a post-war, foreign relations general policy."

In giving an account of his stewardship as the district representative in the House, Beall urged the necessity for getting party voters on the registration books and seeing that newcomers sign their declaration of intentions before November 7 so they can vote in the next presidential election. He promised all the aid it is possible for himself and his office to give in serving the people of the district, and returned hearty thanks for the support that he has received not only in the campaign but since.
